FREE BASIC COMPUTER CLASSES AT CENTRAL LIBRARY
Learn Keyboard Skills, Internet Searching, Email

Santa Barbara, CA.  March 12, 2012 - The Santa Barbara Public Library System will offer free two-hour classes at the Central Library for those wishing to learn the basics of using a computer. In a small group, limited to six participants each, patrons new to computers will learn basic keyboarding skills, how to search the Internet using Google, and how to set up and use an email account. Laptop computers will be provided for instruction.

The class will be offered from 3:00 to 5:00pm on Tuesday, April 3, and will be repeated April 17, and May 1. Classes will be held in the Townley Room at the Central Library, 40 E. Anapamu St. The instructor is retired IT consultant Milt Hess, who has been coaching individuals in learning how to use computers in the library and at other sites.

Registration is required. To sign up for one of these classes, please contact Brent Field at 564-5623, or email at Bfield@SantaBarbaraCA.gov
